

Savell CD Is Released

ATHOL — Lawrence Savell, lawyer by day and songwriter by night, has released a new Christmas CD, “Merry Lexmas From The Lawtunes.” Savell, whose wife is from town, composes, performs and produces law-related allegedly-humorous rock and roll holiday songs released by his independent label, LawTunes.

“Merry Lexmas From the Lawtunes” is the third of his albums to be released. “The Lawyer’s Holiday Humor Album” and “Legal Holiday” are his first two and the new CD continues to take on a broad range of subjects regarding lawyers, the law, legal education and the legal system. The CDs cover the spectrum of life (and strife) as an attorney, “including but not limited to” ridiculous hours and the other sacrifices lawyers (and their families) make, headhunters and lateral movement, client relations, the adversarial system, the art of negotiating, time records and bills, meeting deadlines, document reviews, legal reasoning and argument, cross-examination, business travel and year-end bonuses. The songs incorporate a broad spectrum of rock and roll styles, reflecting the influence of both current bands like Coldplay as well as classic groups and performers like The Beach Boys, Jan and Dean, Bachman-Turner-Overdrive, Jerry Lee Lewis and Elvis.
