

Song of the lawyer

WHAT'S MORE JOLLY during the holidays than a singing lawyer?

Here to make merry is Chadbourne & Parke litigator Lawrence Savell, dba The LawTunes, with a new CD jam-packed with music by a lawyer for lawyers.

The disc is called Live at Blackacre—anyone who's been to law school will know the place. The tunes include "(She's an) Electronic Discovery," about a love interest who shows "no evidence of spoliation," nudge, nudge. Sadly, this is a love "stuck in beta."

There's an ode to the perfect legal secretary. ("Yes," he sings, "I became a lawyer to meet Della Street.") And in keeping with the season, there's a carol about "Santa's G.C." ("Sure, the boss is kinda loud, and the staff a bit short/And you gotta hail a reindeer if you gotta go to court/But I'm certainly glad I signed up for this ride/Cause it's nice to be in-house when it's cold outside.")

Savell is flogging the CD on his Web site, www.LawTunes.com.
